

Nighville New Pilot Concept

Set in an alternate futuristic universe based upon the mid to late 1940's, in this universe, interdimensional travel is quite possible and frequent, with all universes connected to two main access points that allow travel through their own unique, yet separate system of portals called roots. One portal, with access to ten known universes, is controlled by The United Allied Nations (U.A.N), a midsize nation, also known as The Allied Front and the other portal, which has access to twenty known universes, is controlled by The Imperial States of Aion (I.S.A), a united collection of countries under one monarchy, also known as The Aggregates. Both powers have totally different world views and are vying for uniting and control of all known universes, The U.A.N, a Socialistic Republic while the I.S.A, is a Constitutional Monarchy. Tensions have been rising for some between the two powers, due to both using espionage and scouting tactics to gather invaluable intel on the other. Both powers were at a standstill, neither daring to attack the other. The scales of fate tipped in the U.A.N's favor when Asuria Minai, a prominent ISA Nation fed up with The Aggregates tight leash, seceded and joined The Allied Front, offering them the access of their armies, valuable intel, and a strong foot hole in I.S.A territory in exchange for freedom, access to better technology, and favorable trade agreements, thus turning the tide of war in the U.A.N's favor.

The U.A.N now strong enough to take on the I.S.A head on, celebrate their newfound victory at their Main Access Portal located near a small military naval town of Nighville. Ever since they had acquired Asuria Minai as an ally, U.A.N have been planning their full-frontal assault and expanding their military ranks. A good portion of its armies alongside a sea of cadets, and new joins, who had just finished their training, poured in waves into small port town, for a night of celebration and to use their well-earned shore leave to visit their families of their respective dimensions through The Main Access point portals, before continuing forward with the war. Just after night fall the unthinkable happened, a small ISA squadron was spotted appearing seemingly from out of nowhere attack Nighville, laying waste to countless military personnel and civilians while also destroying The Main Access portal in the process, permanently severing link to the rest of U.A.N's forces while also threatening the destruction of the root systems and the dimensions connected to them.

Out of the ashes, three special new joins from three different walks of life will rise to the occasion, all harboring their own unique abilities and personal demons, will have to push aside their differences and join forces, so they can grow as individuals to find a way to restore the main portal, to save the ones they love and defeat The Imperial States of Aion once and for all or die trying.